POLISH NATIONAL BANK AT NEW LOCATION -- Trybuna Ludu, No 206, 29 Jul 49

Reconstruction of the "Pod Orlemi" building on Jasna Street has been completed. It had been started in 1946. During the war, over 70 percent of this building was destroyed. After reorganization of the banking system, the building was assigned for the use of the Polish National Bank. The cubic content of the original building was only 25,000 cubic meters. The new building is built adjacent to the other buildings, thereby gaining an additional 26,000 cubic meters of usable space. In November 1948, the third and fourth floors were occupied, and in December 1948, the second floor. Final construction on the building was completed just a few days ago. The main business department of the Polish National Bank has already been moved into the building from its former location on Nowogrodzka Street.

Through labor competition among the workers and outstanding efforts of the workers, construction of the building was completed before the scheduled date, 15 August 1949. All modern conveniences have been installed in this building.
